BOX RESULTS: Our exclusive Fantasy Boxscores (with target data) are available for review (we'll add games upon completion). Otherwise: Don't yell if you have technical problems. Now let's kick somebody on it! I'm currently in four leagues, using everyone's assistant. I'm number one at 2. The other two, however, I drafted at exactly the same time kind of gave up the halfway assistant (NFL and ESPN require manual entry, easier to erase my printed sheets), I tied 6/10 and I'm solid at 10/10 in both. A lot of things have happened to these teams to end up like this, but it's interesting to see that I'm doing better on the question that I used the assistant as my primary resource. TL;DR - I'm doing well in both leagues I've used it, not good ones I'm not. Here are the best paid fantasy football sites that offer unique, high quality, practical advice at a price that won't break the bank. Based on my experience using them for the entire 2018 season, FantasyPros is the best paid fantasy football consulting site. If you're serious about winning a fantasy football championship and looking to invest in premium fantasy football help from top fantasy experts in the business, FantasyPros is the site for you. FantasyPros is also considered the best fantasy screening site because they track and rank leading analysts from the most popular blogs across the internet. They're one of the best fantasy football consulting sites for help in the draft. And of all fantasy football subscription sites, they provide the best value for your dollar. FantasyPros provides valuable fantasy football tips for almost every aspect of fantasy gameplay. Their premium service includes waiver wire assistance, fantasy football start sitting consultancy, research supplement, and draft assistant. Each of these features offers actionable help for your specific league and fantasy needs. Whether you need fantasy advice before, during, or after your fantasy football draft, FantasyPros has you covered. And they have affordable and flexible subscription plans for every budget. Fantasy Alarm is known for its draft debut flexible cheat sheet guide. They are also known for their SiriusXM fantasy alarm show. This daily show drops the bloody knowledge wrapped in a funny, easy-to-digest package. Their debut paid service is Playbook Pro, a mixture of metrics, tools, and analysis from industry experts. They have monthly and seasonal packages, and you can save 20% on each subscription using promo code: cheatwar. Fantasy footballers are known for their audio content, most notably in their nearly daily podcasts. This group of friends has developed a loyal (some say rabid) following the machine #FootClan to devour any crumb of their fantasy advice. They produce a very popular fantasy football draft kit that includes unique metrics that are hard to find elsewhere. Combined with their affordable DFS package, it's easy to see why they've developed such a powerful surveillance of fantasy football fans.2 Fantasy Football Nerd doesn't have all the bells and whistles of some competitors, but they still have a lot to offer their users. The only factor that helps them stand out is how much value they deliver. While most fantasy football consulting sites charge handsome monthly fees for their services, Fantasy Football and Nerd offers a full year of their services for $19.95. If you're looking for year-round fantasy tips on a budget, the geek is in your corner. By far, the most common way people use fantasy football consulting sites is to get help For the fantasy football draft. Any changes that happen during the season can be difficult to process if you don't have some expert help. The sites below offer draft fantasy football advice in the form of articles, videos, podcasts, forums, and more. These are all established sites providing the best fantasy football analysis online. Fantasy Footballers is the best fantasy football consulting site for draft assistance. They produce a mountain of content in the form of videos and podcasts, but also sell one of the best draft-making packages around (the ultimate draft kit). The fantasy footballers have the best fantasy football draft kit in The Beeze. In addition to the standard player rating you expect from a draft set, it includes video player reviews, guardian tips, statistics simulations, informed insights, and industry-specific draft-focused fantasy tools. Player consistency charts are one of their most useful draft set features. This graphic helps you determine players worth recruiting versus the wonders of one season. FantasyPros Draft Wizard Suite is fantasy football's best draft tool on the market. This draft preparation package includes draft assistant Hannell who provides practical, live fantasy football advice during your fantasy football draft. The Draft Wizard also includes one of the leading draft simulators on the internet, allowing for detailed customization of a simulated draft. You can configure your team's draft position, league roster settings, and then simulate snake-style drafts or auction. Despite their reputation as a value site, Fantasy Football And Nerd has a strong suite of premium draft preparation services. This suite includes Draft Buddy, an interactive cheat sheet that uses their proprietary rating instead of your host site's default list (which is never reliable in my experience). Unlike the FantasyPros draft assistant who is in sync with every draft pick, Buddy The Draft requires you to check recruited players manually. They also make draft selection suggestions and help you monitor bye weeks, but it takes extra effort to keep track. No matter how well your fantasy draft plays, you still have to manage your roster to compete for a championship. Sure, you might have one or two type of players or the type to set up and forget, but you can't take your eye out of bye weeks, injuries, and match-ups. FantasyPros embeds data from the best consulting sites to offer high-quality ensemble offerings. Their start/sit assistant even lets you automatically set up your starting appointment board according to the advice of your favorite fantasy experts (completely hands-free). FantasyPros also shows you the rankings of each expert based on their past successes (or failures) making predictions. By rating experts directly in their own accounts, they eliminate the guesswork of finding a fantasy expert with a proven track record of success. The help fantasy lineup that Fantasy Football Geek offers is somewhat basic, but it's still pretty handy. They provide free-location ratings and forecasts every week for anyone signed. They also have a dashboard analyzer that puts in place composition suggestions based on your imported team data. In addition to offering the optimal lineup, the ensemble analyst provides thorough player analysis. This analysis includes a detailed view of how other players will travel against close opponents. For help with fantasy football lineup, Fantasy Alarm offers a simple comparison feature of Start/Sit players, importable lineups and weekly predictions/ratings. Their most advanced features are included in their flagship product: Playbook Pro.In addition, Fantasy Alarm publishes a wide range of reports on less common statistics like snaps, volume, consistency, and training. Often, these margin metrics can be just what you need to get the easy edge that makes all the difference. Top fantasy owners regularly scan the waiver wire for promising upgrades as well. You never know when injuries or problems off the field are going to force a jolt to your team's roster. Owners should be prepared to reverse (or do damage control) in case of the unexpected. But when it comes to concessions, the best fantasy football sites help sites automatically detect potential upgrades on an ongoing basis. Again, FantasyPros takes the cake when it comes to evaluating talent and wire waivers. Their seamless integration with your league host makes it very simple to find players who can immediately improve your roster. Looking to upgrade location? Their league analyst is analyzing a fantasy football team on steroids that identifies areas of need so you can plug the holes before your ship starts to sink. Guess what, I can't do that FantasyPros has helping concessions too! After it syncs with your league, it projects the best improvements to your roster from the pool of the remaining players. This is where I examine their waiver assistant in detail. They also include helpful waiver cheat sheets detailing how your current players compare to a free agent pool. These sheets emphasize opportunities for improvement in a visual format that is easily perceived. Fantasy Football Geek offers weekly predictions to help you make sensible roster decisions. They publish a wire-waiver report (accessible through their ensemble analyzer) that provides useful comparisons. Best fantasy football research site for owners looking for expert help on a budget. You can also take advantage of their most additional/decreased reports to determine hot and cold players each week. Reports are generated every 48 hours through waiver activity at Yahoo, CBS Sports and ESPN. Fantasy Alarm has a number of features to help you evaluate free agents. For instance, their video series Trust em or Dust em breaks down intriguing players on the concessions of most leagues. Their player comparison feature allows you to compare individual players in your team to those available on concessions. If you're trying to decide whether to file a claim and replace a player, this feature can help you make the right decision. Just like in the NFL, fantasy football is a game of inches.
